

Holcombe Village Streets and Buildings

This document has the occupants of selected streets from the date of first build up to the present time.

The streets are

Alba Street

Emmanuel Church Clock & Church

Cross Lane

Moor Road

Peel Tower

Shoulder of Mutton

Alba Street, Holcombe

A courthouse was built in Holcombe in 1664 by the Duke of Albermarle (after whom Alba Street is probably named) who had been given the land by Charles II after the Restoration; this was also used as a school. The building was below the church on the site of the "Old Rectory" and was not demolished until 1864. There is a small stone walled area between the gardens of 1 Lumb Carr Road and 1 Alba Street which is known as the Drying Ground (originally for residents of 2 and 4 Lumb Carr Road which had no gardens).

1891 Census lists it as Albert Street, but it comes between The Shoulder of Mutton and 1 Lumb Carr Road, so presuming it's a mistake.

Emmanuel Church, Holcombe - Clock

1874 – Burial of William Bates (55) on 13th September 1874 at Emmanuel Church, Holcombe. Abode: Ardwick, Chorlton on Medlock, Manchester.

“The church tower is furnished with a goodly gas-lit clock, which, day and night, looks benignly along the village. A marble tablet, placed by the parishioners inside the church, to an honoured native, is inscribed thus -

‘In Loving Memory of WILLIAM BATES, M.D., Of Manchester, Whose body lies in the family vault in the adjoining churchyard. THE CLOCK was placed in the Tower of this Church, by His Widow and Children, As a tribute of respect to His Noble character and most useful life.

This tablet is inscribed on behalf of The parishioners of Holcombe, in thankful appreciation of the gift. Henry Dowsett, Rector. J. Meadowcroft and J. Renshaw, Wardens. G. Thorpe and R. Bramley, Sidesmen. Decr. 1877’.

The clock forms a meet memorial ; and, in its practical utility, is worthy of the widowed lady — nee Hill — a niece of Sir Rowland Hill, who — as his statue in the heart of London records, and all the world knows — “Founded Uniform Penny Postage, 1840.”.”

“The Country & Church of the Cheeryble Brothers” by Rev William Hume Elliot, published in 1893. Page 66.

“And the cold and gusty wind, while driving a sombre cavalcade of clouds along above the hill, like a great funereal train of the departed day, moaned round the buttressed tower of the church, and whisked and sighed with plaintive eeriness among the silent stones and lone leafless trees, as if in quest of some loved one who had fled like the vanished day, and gone to the realm of silence among the sleeping forms beneath. But, as we stood by the triple step of the darkened sun-dial, a glowing planet shone through the rifted clouds, and stars from the depths beyond; the church clock told out its tale of fleeting time, and its illumined face beamed along the upland village, as we left the impressive spot, thinking how strangely linked are the now and the then, the here and the yonder — the lowly graves of time and the glories of eternity”

“The Country & Church of the Cheeryble Brothers” by Rev William Hume Elliot, published in 1893. Page 69.

Emmanuel Church, Holcombe - Sundial Grade 2 listed.

THE REVEREND HENRY DOWSETT AND THE TERPSICHOREAN ART

“Today, the Rev Henry Dowsett, vicar of Holcombe from 1875 to 1905, is chiefly remembered for his two books, ‘Notes on Holcombe’ (1901) and ‘Holcombe Long Ago’ (1902) published at the turn of the century. These collections of short historical articles are liberally laced with poetic quotations and flights of fancy and perhaps tell us as much about the author's character as they do about the history of Holcombe. A few years before his books were published, Dowsett was involved in an amusing incident which throws even more light on the character of this Victorian clergyman. In the 1890s, there was a hut on Holcombe Hill known as ‘Uncle Tom’s Cabin’, which, in the words of the Ramsbottom Observer was ‘principally used by lovers of the terpsichorean art.’ On Whit Friday 1892, a dancing class was being taught there, while at the same time the field day following Holcombe Church Sunday School's Whitsuntide procession took place in an adjoining field. Refreshments were provided and games were played, but dancing was strictly forbidden, ‘this form of recreation by no means finding favour in the eyes of the Vicar.’ Many of the older scholars felt that this was unfair and when evening came they made their way to Uncle Tom’s Cabin ‘All thoughts of the Sunday School and the Rev H. Dowsett’s declarations against the evils of dancing were forgotten for the nonce, and the truants were just beginning to enjoy themselves when they were awe-stricken by the appearance on the scene of the Vicar himself.’ Mr Dowsett burst into the Cabin, told the musician to stop, denounced the dancers for their sinful foity and ordered his scholars to leave immediately, ‘all the time wildly flourishing his umbrella.’ Some of the scholars prepared to leave, but others stood their ground and even had the temerity to ask whether the Vicar had paid to enter the hut. Naturally Mr Dowsett hadn't and was asked by Mr Booth, the proprietor, either to leave or to pay up. Mr Dowsett refused on both accounts, so Mr Booth threatened to carry him out. The ‘Observer’ reported that ‘The parson dared him to lay hands on him, but Mr Booth apparently does not stand in awe of the Church, as finding persuasion was useless, he caught hold of the intruder and bodily carried him outside. 'Threats of a summons for assault were made, but in fact Dowsett appears to have taken no action, perhaps realising that he was as much in the wrong as those who had 'enjoyed themselves to the giddy strains of a concertina'. "

Emmanuel Church, Holcombe. Grade 2 Listed.

1651 - Rev. Henry Pendlebury.

The chapel was only small measuring 50 x 24 feet.

There is no name recorded for a Rector between 1662 and 1733.

"The chapel stands well up the slope above Ramsbottom, to the west, and just below the prominent and picturesque height on which Holcombe Church is built. From its proximity to Holcombe, and also, perhaps, because its congregation was originally the ejected congregation of Holcombe in 1662, it was also called 'Holcom,' and 'Holcombe Lower Chapel.'

Its graveyard and manse garden abut on Nuttall Lane — now in part " Dundee Lane" — which links the old village of Nuttall with that of Holcombe ; hence it was likewise known as Nuttall, and Nuttall Lane Chapel."

From "The Country and Church of the Cheeryble Brothers" by Rev W. H. Elliott, 1893. Page 19.

"In front of the Chancel in Holcombe Church, two stones bear the following inscriptions : —

Here resteth the Body of Mary Rothwell, The Daughter of Edward Rothwell of Holcome, who departed this Life, May the 27th 1726, And in the 10th year of her age. "Short was her life. The longer is her rest ; God takes them soonest, Whom He loveth best." Also the Body of Thomas Rothwell of Harpers in Holcome, Who departed this Life the 22nd day of July 1781, In the 46th year of his age. Also, of Martha, his Wife, Who died February 5, 18 14. Aged 84 Years. Here resteth the Body of Richard Rothwell of Ramsbottom, who departed this Life, December 4th 1745, In the 43rd year of his age."

1871 - William Hewitson, former editor of the Bury Times in conversation with "an old grey-haired villager" which took place on August 26th 1871 during a visit to Holcombe.

"Mr Hewitson states that about one hundred years previously there stood an old thatched cottage at Holcombe on the rising side of the present highway and on a level with the Old Pack Horse route: some years later the old tenement was pulled down and the White Hart public house erected there. He told him that in the top storey of an outbuilding on the left side of and connected with the White Hart was a room, approached by a flight of steps from the rear, where the cockpit was located. Cockfighting also took place on the floor of a barn which formed part of the same building, but the principal matches took place in the aforementioned room. The birds that were to do battle were penned and fed in two places, one party would use the top storey of a building on the right of the White Hart approached by a flight of steps and in later times used as a joiner's shop; the other party would use a small outbuilding at the rear of and connected with the Shoulder of Mutton."

1871 Census – White Hart Public House, Holcombe, Lydia Alexander (49) born in Herefordshire. Nieces – Martha Crouch (21) and Kate Crouch (19) both born in Staffordshire. Servant Hannah Hartley (13) born in Warwickshire. Boarders – Richard Bentley (43) and Robert Yates (67) both born in Lancashire.

1893 - "I found myself in the centre of the village of Holcombe , and directly opposite Mr T. A. Crook's residence. Many years ago, this building was a celebrated public house under the name of the White Hart, but was better known as Higher House, a name it retains at the present day. In the old days of cockfighting and other barbarous customs, which found much favour at Holcombe, Higher House was a well-known resort. On the green opposite its entrance competitors used to grin through horse collars for prizes, and it not infrequently happened that an onlooker who was not a competitor, but merely stood by and grinned at the gridders, was unexpectedly awarded the prize. About ten years ago the licence of the house was sold and removed to the Waterloo Inn near Holcombe Brook. The external appearance of Higher House has been greatly altered since Mr Crook became its tenant, but its association with the wakes of olden days will not soon be forgotten. At the North gable end is an inscription which speaks of former ownership: John and Mary Rostron, 1820. On the right of Higher House stands a three-storey building. Once upon a time the top floor used to be open to the sky, and it was retained for the purpose of cockfighting. In those days a flight of stone steps led up to it from the rear, and hundreds of mains have been fought there."
Bury Times dated 20th May 1893

Peel Monument or Holcombe Tower, Bury - Grade 2 listed.

Robert Peel is best known for his creation of the London police force in 1829. To avoid any confusion or association with the army, the police were dressed in blue tail coats and top hats, and carried truncheons. Ten years later, his police force model was rolled out to the rest of the country.

The second thing Peel is remembered for, is abolishing the much-hated Corn Laws. Bread was a staple food of most of the population and was of particular importance to the poor. The Corn Laws imposed tariffs on grain imported from abroad, and these tariffs kept the price of bread artificially high. This benefitted the landowners, who had a guaranteed price for their grain.

Many of his Conservative MPs represented the land-owning class and were keen defenders of the Corn Laws. Peel however was very interested in tariff-free trade with other countries, and this may have been the main motive for his decision to repeal the Corn Laws. The decision split his Conservative Party and led to the downfall of his government.

Peel died in 1850 and almost immediately a campaign was started to raise a statue to him in Bury, and place a large monument on the top of Holcombe Hill. Local industrialists were quick to form a Monuments Committee headed by William Grant, part of the wealthy and influential Grant family of Ramsbottom. Designed by the members of the Monument Committee: Grant, Ashton, Joshua Knowles, Gorton and possibly Cunliffe. In an article in the Blackburn Standard (15th September 1852) it stated "This monument consists of a massive square tower, on Holcombe Hill, at the cost of Mr. Joshua Knowles." William Grant as chairman, he insisted that the tower be built in line with St Andrews Church (which he had constructed in 1832) when viewed from the front door of his own Nuttall Hall.

The tower cost £1000 to build and the stone to construct it was quarried from the top of the hill, right next to the tower. You can still see the hole left behind. The monument stands at 128 feet tall. In the middle of its large base section is the entrance, with the word "PEEL" above the door. The base supports the tower, which has four stages of mullioned windows. Both the base and the top of the tower have battlements.

1852 - On 8th September 1852, Edward Hodges Bailey's statue of Peel was unveiled in Bury town centre. The next day, a separate ceremony took place on top of the hill for the opening of the tower. Joshua Knowles, owner of Tottington calico works gave a speech, as did Peel's son Frederick, who was guest of honour. Frederick stated that the tower was a splendid memorial both to his father and to free trade.

1854 History & Directory of Mid-Lancashire – Samuel Taylor, Keeper of Peel's Tower, Holcombe.

1871 Worrall's Trade Directory - On Holcombe hill stands a square stone tower, erected in 1851-2, at a cost of £800 to the memory of the late Sir R. Peel, the 2nd Baronet. An excellent view of the surrounding country being obtainable from the tower, is much frequented by pleasure parties in the summer season.

1880 Barrett's Directory - Holcombe stands on an eminence, and from the tower erected on its summit in 1851-2, at a cost of £900, to the memory of the late Sir Robert Peel (second baronet), are obtained some extensive and pleasing views of the surrounding country.

1888 Slater's Trade Directory – The village stands on an eminence, and there was erected in 1852, on the summit of Holcombe Moor a handsome square tower of stone, 120 feet high, to the memory of the late Sir Robert Peel, from the top of which an extensive view of the surrounding neighbourhood may be enjoyed. Peel Tower, Holcombe Hill – James Booth, Jun., Keeper.

1929 – "27th May 1929 Fire at Peel Tower, Holcombe Hill. Estimated damage £20."

From The Diary of Richard Barlow. A Ramsbottom Postman 1882 to 1925.

By 1929, the monument needed to be repaired. As well as general renovations, the rotten wooden internal stair case was replaced with an iron one. Part of Peel's resignation speech which had already featured on his town centre statue was now replicated on carved marble and placed within the base of the tower. It states "It may be that I shall leave a name sometime remembered with expressions of goodwill in the abode of those, whose lot it is to labour, and to earn their daily bread with the sweat of their brow – when they shall recruit their exhausted strength with abundant and untaxed food the sweeter, because it is no longer leavened with a sense of injustice."

1930s - A local farmer named Percy Vickers took over the running of the monument, charging an entrance fee to all those who went inside for the climb.

1939 to 1945 - During the Second World War the tower was used as a look-out post.

"The area that was the responsibility of (Home Guard) D Company was covering most of the moorlands in the area as well as the town and the surrounding villages. Holcombe Tower, Grants Tower and Owd Betts pub were outposts of the Company."

From a larger article written by Fred Entwistle in RHS News Magazine No 10 Winter 1994
1947 - The iron stairs were so badly rusted they were judged to be unsafe and so the tower was closed to the public. Ownership passed to Ramsbottom Borough Council and although external repairs were done from time to time over the next few decades.

1985 - Thirty eight years after it was closed, it was finally reopened when a new concrete staircase was put in place. The reopening ceremony 12th November 1985 the photograph shows Sir Derek Barber, R.U.D.C. and Albert Little.

1999 – Millennium celebrations, a beacon constructed near Peel Tower and lit to commemorate the Millennium.

"My brother and I this time were the only family members to set out on that gloomy, drizzle-soaked last evening of the 1900s to attend the so-called Millennium Bonfire. The powerful illuminating lights around Emmanuel Church struggled to make any impression against that all-pervading low cloud. More cars in Holcombe Village than I had ever seen, stretching way down Lumb Carr Road. Chapel Lane snarled up. A refreshments van and a great pile of cardboard boxes by the Shoulder of Mutton car park, soggy and disintegrating - had contained hundreds of wax candle-torches. A great throng on Cross Lane, all very good humoured - most going up, but many struggling against the human tide to come down. Pinpoints of candle light and beams from every size of torch moved up the hillside track, churned into yellowy brown liquid mud by the rain and thousands of feet. Mud splattered trousers, everyone in anoraks, many under every type of umbrella, and lots of toddlers cocooned in polythene as their parents struggled with buggies. Discarded cans and bottles at every few paces. Snatches of mobile phone conversation. As many people pushing past each other as on the busiest Saturday morning on Bridge Street. An ocean of people standing on the banks near the Tower, faces glinting in the drizzle and its huge lights, though only its great plinth visible, the rest lost in cloud. Impossible to get within 30 yards of the massive bonfire stack, which had been visible all day from the town centre. Easily two thousand up there, when it was lit soon after 9:00pm. Orange tongues licking intermittently up out of the smoke, reflecting in the gloom. Red diddy-men hats with 2000 digits in white. Just two hours of the 1900s left - we slurried back down, against the still oncoming crowds, the fire was lost in the cloud, and the first firework went off, as intense as a quarry being dynamited. The air and ground quivered. Wire fence by the path, flashes, it tat tats and booms of further explosions, lighting up parts of the hillside - I could believe we were back at the other end of the century, near Ypres."

Written by Andrew Todd in RHS News Magazine No 19 Spring 2000

2002 – Celebrations for the 150th year anniversary. See photos.

"This turned out to be a great success, the weather being fine with enough breeze to make the flags and bunting on the Tower flutter. The banner hanging down its front proclaimed: '150 years, Happy Birthday Peel Tower' and featured half way down a head and shoulders portrait of Sir Robert. The Brass Band and Punch and Judy took it in turns to entertain the ever growing crowd until 2 o'clock when the main ceremony commenced. The Summerseat Players and ladies in all their finery cut an impressive sight on the brightly decorated stage erected immediately in front of the Tower. Following a brief introduction and synopsis on the life, times and achievements of Sir Robert by our Master of Ceremonies they commenced the re-enactment using a script written by Louise FITZWALTER and Margaret CARRUTHERS, based, in the absence of any details of the original speeches, on what had been said by the same individuals at the unveiling of PEEL's statue in Bury the day before. The re-enactment ceremony closed with three hearty cheers for Sir Robert PEEL, general and hearty applause and a rousing chorus of 'Rule Britannia' being sung by all present. The Helmsshore and Rossendale Brass Band and Punch and Judy played on and the Tower was open to all comers. And a good day was had by all!"

Written by John Ireland in RHS News Magazine No 23 Spring 2002

The monument is now owned by Bury Metropolitan Borough Council and once a month volunteers are on hand to open the doors so that people may enter in and trek to the top. A flag is flown from the tower to let people know it is open.

2022 – A CCTV camera installed on the flag pole, relaying live pictures to the Bury Tourist Information Centre in the Fusilier Museum, Bury.

2022 – “Peel Tower flag hoisted as part of £6,000 project. A new flag has been proudly hoisted on top of Peel Tower as a £6,000 community project opens up - with visitors to Bury town centre now able to enjoy spectacular views of the borough. Semi-retired businessman Trevor Davies has finally completed his project to showcase the beauty of Bury from the top of the historic Holcombe Hill building. Initially only intending to repair the flag pole, Trevor developed the ambitious idea to have two cameras atop the tower, live streaming straight into the tourist information centre on Moss Street in Bury. The 360 and zoom cameras can only be seen from the information centre as Trevor encourages more people to go and make the most of what Bury has to offer. Joined by helping hands from Lancashire Home Interiors on Tuesday, the Bury Times and ITV were taken on a bumpy ride up Holcombe Hill, along with tools and a huge flagpole. Once at the top of the hill and bottom of the tower, we began the steep walk up the stone steps with the flag and pole in tow. From the top, the views are spectacular, and it is no wonder that Trevor was enticed to embark on the expensive project, as the view is something to be marvelled. His project involved a lot of hard work, technology, money and public liability insurance, but Trevor has been determined to get the job done. Ahead of the cameras being fitted, he said: ‘The whole job has taken months of planning and hard work to get ready for the big day on Tuesday, August 30, when we plan to fit the flagpole, flag and install the large tv monitor and housing unit in tourist info.’ The tourist information office in Bury has access to the cameras so members of the public can zoom in and around the landscape in real-time.”
