1983 – “In the early 1980s a campaign began to place a memorial in Seclin. This was led by Harry Wroe, an ex-Lancashire Fusilier who ran ‘The Fusilier’ pub on Bolton Road West. He was also the secretary of the Fusiliers’ Association and member of the Dunkirk Veterans’ Association’s Ramsbottom branch. Initially their efforts were rebuffed by communist Mayor Jean Demailly, as a protest at the death of Bobby Sands, the IRA hunger striker, but on 4th September 1983 the town of Seclin named a square ‘Square du Capitaine R.W. Porritt’. Mrs. Thatcher’s private secretary sent Mr. Wroe a letter congratulating all on their efforts. On 31st August 1985, an engraved copper plaque was attached to a pillar in the square by Harry Wroe and colleagues. It gave details of the bombing raid in which Capt. Porritt, 12 British soldiers and 25 people of Seclin died. Monsieur Demailly was also present. Mr. Wroe said, ‘All has been forgotten. We are the best of friends now.’”
