Green Mount

“James PORRITT, the second son of Joseph and Naomi, was born in 1810. He married Mary Hannah AUSTIN in 1833. James along with his brothers Joseph Junior and Samuel built Stubbins Vale Mills in 1851, James being the architect. He then built his home, Stubbins Vale House, as well as two other substantial residences - Green Mount Lodge and The Cliffe”

Written by Lynne Porritt Newton, Victoria, Australia, from a larger article in RHS News Magazine No 11
Summer 1995

“An Introduction to Lavender Hills. Its magnificent location is why 160 years ago Samuel Porritt had The Cliffe built there in the first place...close to the family mill in the valley below and only a few hundred yards from the homes of his brothers, James and Joseph. Their mansions, Stubbins Vale House and Green Mount were within easy distance of each other. They were built from millstone grit quarried nearby on their estate and were close to their various mills making felt, cotton and woollen products for a demanding and growing market.”

“James Edward PORRITT was born in 1855 the 14th child of James and Mary Hannah PORRITT of Stubbins Vale House. He grew up to be a Professor of Music, playing both Organ and Piano. In 1878 he married Amelia KELLY whose father Thomas was a calico printer. However, I don’t think this union was looked on at all favourably by the rest of the family as James Edward only notified his father of the marriage as a postscript to a letter, which read: ‘I am now married to Amelia KELLY with whom I am happy and most comfortable.’ James Edward went on to start a brewery with a partner. This venture did not succeed and they went bankrupt in 1883. James Edward together with his wife Amelia and their three children, James Austin (seven), Edith Adeline (three), and Arnold Clement (seven months) boarded the Orient Steamship line's Chimborazo at Tilbury on 22nd July 1886, arriving in Melbourne, Australia, on 4th September. They took up residence at 60, Brighton Street, Richmond for about one year, after which they moved to Byron Villa in St Kilda, just to the south of Melbourne. He, James Edward, was a remittance man. The family sent him £25 per quarter and Amelia took in gentleman boarders of good breeding and served an excellent table to supplement the family income. James Edward obtained a part time clerical position with J DALE and Co's Atlas Works, a position he held for a period of three years. He also gave music lessons on organ and piano. From the time he arrived in Melbourne, James Edward succumbed to respiratory illness and fevers. He was not a robust man and became very seriously ill in 1889 and was hospitalised several times during that year, the last being in November. He died on 17th November 1889 aged 34, thus leaving Amelia almost destitute with three young children."

Stubbins Vale Woollen Mill

"On the west side of the valley, opposite the Chatterton estate, lies that of Stubbins Vale, where, during the past forty years, Mr James Porritt, J. P., and during the latter portion of that period, his sons — Mr Richard and Mr John Austin Porritt — have done so much by their model works, elegant residences, and judicious planting of trees, not only to advance the industrial prosperity, but also to enhance the amenity and beauty, of this portion of the valley. The brothers Porritt — Joseph, James, and Samuel — began their woollen-manufacturing career at Dearden Clough Mill. The former factory was nearly wrecked by the memorable " Cowpe Flood." Subsequently Mr John Austin joined the partnership, and the firm became Messrs Porritt Brothers & Austin. This firm began to build the splendid works at Stubbins Vale in 1851. In 1857 Mr Joseph retired from the partnership and established the firm of Messrs Joseph Porritt & Sons at Sunnybank, Helmshore; and, similarly, in 1866, Mr Samuel founded the firm of Messrs Samuel Porritt & Sons at Bamford. Of these brothers, Mr James, the venerable head of the firm at Stubbins Vale, still survives."

1932 – “My birthday was the 9th November; and when I became 14 years I had to leave this lovely school (Peel Brow Central School) at Christmas end of term. After Christmas I went to PORRITTS to see Mr James HOYLE, the Manager, and he said I could start on Monday, which was 30th December and at the end of that day, the foreman, Mr Jack CROMPTON, said would I come at 6 am in the morning, so there was I at 6am on New Year's Eve working, reaching in! Tom SWINDLEHURST moved on when I started, then I had a good relationship with George BONE before he moved on to weaving, being replaced by George DUCKWORTH. When I had been there a few months, Mr Frank WHITTAKER, an elderly weaver, told me to come to him in my spare time and he taught me to weave, unofficially. After two years reaching in, I was moved to drawing in, then two years later I was sent to learn weaving with Herbert DENNIS. In the war years PORRITT's paid 10 shillings weekly to “single” dependants. I left PORRITT's in November 1947 to become apprentice overlooker at SHEPHERDS Ltd. Ramsbottom. At this juncture I would like to say my Grandfather Edwin “Ned” WAKELIN also worked at PORRITT's and indeed gained a 50 years service certificate. He was a stockwright and joiner and supervisor and is reputed to have made and fixed the large window facing the road, of the cottonfelt weaving shed. Edwin WAKELIN'S father (Joseph WAKELIN) had responded to an advert in the 1870s in the national newspapers for people to come and work at PORRITT's. They would be provided with a job, a house to rent and their travel expenses paid. So Joseph WAKELIN upped sticks as they say and brought his wife and family from Croughton in Northamptonshire to Stubbins. In the 1881 Census he was living at Stubbins Vale, occupation carter. All these people, including my grandfather, Edwin WAKELIN and my great-grandfather, Joseph WAKELIN are buried in Stubbins United Reformed graveyard.”

A number were taped by the Society, and other former workers were interviewed at their homes. All the former employees that contacted us stressed how happy their time there had been - a good employee which has a strong tradition of loyalty amongst its workforce. Very much a family firm in more ways than one - it was hard to get a job there unless a relative ‘spoke up’ for you. “*

"An Introduction to Lavender Hills. Its magnificent location is why 160 years ago Samuel Porritt had The Cliffe built there in the first place...close to the family mill in the valley below and only a few hundred yards from the homes of his brothers, James and Joseph. Their mansions, Stubbins Vale House and Green Mount were within easy distance of each other. They were built from millstone grit quarried nearby on their estate and were close to their various mills making felt, cotton and woollen products for a demanding and growing market. The Cliffe was a grand family home as befitted a prominent industrialist. A visitor described her experience of a garden party at The Cliffe in 1900: "A charming country estate an orchard in the dell to the left and the circular lawn bedded over with a thousand plants and bordered by blue lobelia and standard roses. The approach along the sweep of the gravel drive is availed by copper beeches and silver birches in rare profusion."

Two special baskets with locks would be taken to Ramsbottom Station in time for the 8-45am train, one on Tuesdays, the other on Fridays. There would be a change of trains, hence no doubt the locks, and a chauffeur would meet the train at Grange, bringing the empty for the return journey. This practice was only ended by the introduction of meat rationing in World War II."

“..... it seems that the famous stage and screen actor Dirk Bogarde was not so thrilled when he was billeted at the nearby Green Mount at the start of World War Two. He wrote about the area in his autobiography: “I was billeted in a cotton mill owner’s abandoned mansion on a hillside in a suburb of Bury called Ramsbottom, locally known as Tups Arse because it was the end of everything. From the terrace of the house, grimed with soot and wind, one looked down into a grey, fogged landscape of endless slated roofed back-to-backs and soaring mills throbbing with trundling looms, glittering with acres of lighted windows and huge chimneys belching smoke endlessly into the curdled air which loitered over the spoiled valley until eventually it was dispersed across the distant moor. It was sad, cobbled, drab and poor.”

1981 – *“The mansions Stubbins Vale and Greenmount are no more but thankfully The Cliffe has been preserved and is now restored. Memories remain. A lady of my age I spoke to remembers the main hallway when she visited as a girl more than 60 years ago. She told me the hall floor was beautiful terracotta tiling in blue, white and black. papers in the Bury Archive there is a flyer and auction catalogue for the sale of the house together with two acres of land in 1981. Also included at the auction were 350 lots of furniture, pictures, porcelain and silver. The name remained after the sale and it became a care home as The Cliffe. The present owners renamed it the Lavender Hills Care Home and carried out the extensive restoration."

"As things turned out the Council (RUDC) soon found they could hand on the responsibility for the electricity supply to another body. In December 1900 a letter was received from the Lancashire Electric Power Company stating that they were preparing plans to distribute electricity throughout the area and offering to include the district from Holcombe Brook to Edenfield. Terms were eventually agreed with the company and the work of laying high tension mains began in the autumn of 1905. In the next few years, power was supplied to TURNBULL and STOCKDALE's at Rose Bank and the Chatterton Weaving Co, both of which had their own transformer, but it was not until August 1910 that a general electricity supply for the town was begun. The opening of the 'transforming chamber' in Paradise Street on 20th August 1910 was heralded as 'a new era in the social and industrial annals of Ramsbottom'."

1938 - STARTING WORK

"On the Thursday before Good Friday 1938, I left school which I had attended from the age of three to 14. Weeks before, with my Dad, I had made the short journey to the Chatterton Weaving Company's mill to see if any workers were needed. Great news - one girl was ready to move on to be a trainee. I was told to be at the works at 7.45am on the Tuesday after Easter. As I had never been inside a mill before, I was wondering what it would be like. I was all agog - I would be a wage earner at last. The night before the 'big day', as for the rest of my working life, I laid out my clothes ready for the morning. As a mill girl, which is what I was going to be, these consisted of a jumper and skirt, printed overall, black woollen stockings, and of course my clogs - well polished and newly shod (i.e. irons, front and heels). On the day itself my mother awoke me and my brother. He was older than me and so already working. After breakfast, which we all had every day before being allowed out of the house, I finally set off fully equipped with tea, sugar, a pot, spoon, milk in a small bottle and some sandwiches for the morning break. On my way I was to meet some women who already worked at the mill. I had never been out so early before and was surprised to see so many people about. In 1938 most people walked to work, although some came by bus or bike. There were very few cars in those days. As we walked along Chatterton Lane we were joined by others at the Mill who encouraged me by saying "Don't worry love the first week is always the worst - but never be late". When we arrived we went through the door in single file. Standing just inside was the foreman, Mr Howarth, who was there to make sure everyone "clocked on". Each worker had a number and the big, round, iron clock had an arm that swung round to punch each number, a bell rang and the exact time was recorded on a continuous sheet of paper. We clocked on when we arrived in a morning, off at 12.15pm for dinner, on again at 1.15pm and off again at 5.30pm when we finished for the day. Being new I was taken by a woman weaver to the place where I was to work. There I met two girls I already knew because we had been at Stubbins Council School together. The whistle was blown by Mr Howarth and the weavers went to their looms. The electric motors were then switched on - what a NOISE as the looms started up. This was my first minute of work. For the first hour I just watched the girl I was going to take over from. Then we had fifteen minutes break for tea. Then it was my turn. The work was in the first stage of weaving, the warps sized and put into beam, a long comb held the threads which were picked out in twos and put on to a double reed hook. The man called a drawer-in had got the healds four staves, narrow 36" ready and proceeded to draw in (1-3,2-4, plain cloth) left to right. This was a slow process. I was very nervous and glad when 12.15pm came and I could go home for dinner. At one o'clock I set off to join all the others walking back to work. The bell at Rosebank rang as we approached the mill so we knew we had five minutes as the bell was always rung to warn the workers to be in ready to start work. In the afternoon I seemed to work a little faster, hopefully making progress, and at three o'clock we had another break. By 5.30pm my back was aching, my fingers were sore and I was half asleep. When I finally reached home the big question around the tea table was "How did your first day go?" my reply was "I think I'll get used to it". After tea I was let off the washing up, but "just for today". "Don't think you will get out of it because you are now a worker" warned my Mum as I rushed off to see my pal who was waiting to hear all about my first day at work. She was younger than me and still at school. By 9.30pm I was off to bed my last thought before sleep: "is this the start of my life to come?"

THE TURNBULL TALE

"Founder William's son Percy was killed on the Somme in 1916. His grandson, Herbert survived Dunkirk in 1940 but was killed on manoeuvres on Salisbury Plain in 1941 and awaits a War Gravestone in Edenfield. Geoffrey was killed by a sniper and buried near Caen, Normandy, in August 1944, both of them sons of Richard Turnbull, who lived until 1953, having served as Chairman of Ramsbottom UDC. Many of the family are buried in Edenfield Churchyard, but there are memorial windows to founder William and son Percy in St Paul's Church, Ramsbottom."

"Other social effects of the firm abound. A cluster of distinctive houses adorns the area. Crossmoor was built in 1914, by Joyce's father Benjamin Turnbull, born at Greens House, Stacksteads. The family lived there until 1973, although he died in 1930. Highbury, near the top of Chatterton Old Lane, was erected in 1912? by Richard Turnbull. A similar house, Croft Hey, off Bolton Road North (now a residential home) was built by founder William. Geoffrey Turnbull designed Lane End House in Edenwood Lane in 1935 and his son Edward lived there until 1977. Moorganh on Whalley Road was built about 1932 and looks down on Edenwood. St Philip's Church School at Chatterton is oddly the only building to bear a Turnbull datestone, laid by Captain William Turnbull in 1933, after he had been Treasurer of the Building Fund."

"The original Community Centre building in Edenfield was a wartime hut moved from Cuba Mill, through the help of Richard Turnbull, and Philip Dunne is the Trustees' president now."

“At this juncture I would like to say my Grandfather Edwin “Ned” WAKELIN also worked at PORRITT's and indeed gained a 50 years service certificate. He was a stockwright and joiner and supervisor and is reputed to have made and fixed the large window facing the road, of the cottonfelt weaving shed. Edwin WAKELIN'S father (Joseph WAKELIN) had responded to an advert in the 1870s in the national newspapers for people to come and work at PORRITT's. They would be provided with a job, a house to rent and their travel expenses paid. So Joseph WAKELIN upped sticks as they say and brought his wife and family from Croughton in Northamptonshire to Stubbins. In the 1881 Census he was living at Stubbins Vale, occupation carter. All these people, including my grandfather, Edwin WAKELIN and my great-grandfather, Joseph WAKELIN are buried in Stubbins United Reformed graveyard.”

North Street

"Looking up North Street, Strongstry today (the odd numbers are then on the right) I realised that there were 14 families, the same number that in previous Census returns had been called Buckden Terrace. The even numbers on the left were built in the 1870s, all back to back houses, and those were offered to immigrant workers. Indeed, I think according to the 1881 Census there were five or six families called NUTTER on the even number side, these people came from the Gisburn area. So I think Buckden Terrace became North Street. "

Road leads to farm, now a private house.

"Looking up North Street, Strongstry today (the odd numbers are then on the right) I realised that there were 14 families, the same number that in previous Census returns had been called Buckden Terrace. The even numbers on the left were built in the 1870s, all back to back houses, and those were offered to immigrant workers. Indeed, I think according to the 1881 Census there were five or six families called NUTTER on the even number side, these people came from the Gisburn area. So I think Buckden Terrace became North Street. "

1947 - "This brought back memories for many locals of the great Irwell inundation of September 1947, when 6.28 inches of rain were recorded in Bury between the 1st and 20th of that month. In the 12 hours after 9pm on Thursday 18th September 1947, 2.24 inches fell:- First news of the flooding came from Ramsbottom when the Irwell, overflowing into Stubbins Lane and Kenyon Street, turned the Ramsbottom Cricket Field and Nuttall Park into a huge lake. The rapidly rising water, travelling at 15 miles an hour, wakened the householders in Stubbins at 4a.m. Three hours later water a foot deep was swirling along Stubbins Lane — At 9 o'clock water at Stubbins Lane was three feet deep, and all traffic had to be diverted through Shuttleworth. Householders . . . watched helplessly as the water continued to rise. In Strongstry, residents took shelter in their bedrooms, while their furniture floated round their kitchens."
